"Look to this Day!

For it is Life, the very Life of Life.

In its brief course lie all the

Verities and Realities of your Existence;

The Bliss of Growth,

The Glory of Action,

The Splendor of Beauty;

For Yesterday is but a Dream,

And Tomorrow is only a Vision;

But Today well lived makes every Yesterday a Dream of Happiness, and every

Tomorrow a Vision of Hope.

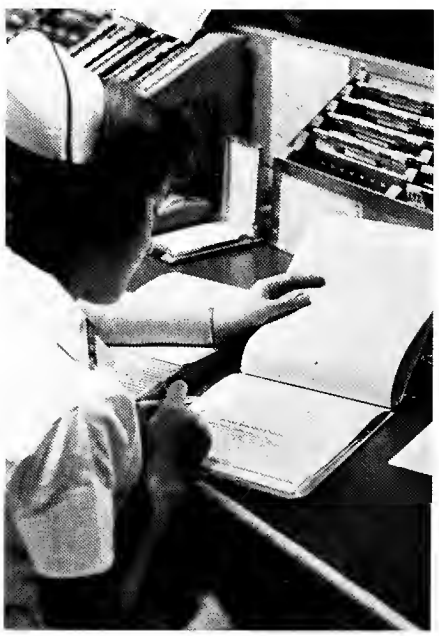

Look well therefore to this Day!"

From the SANSKRIT

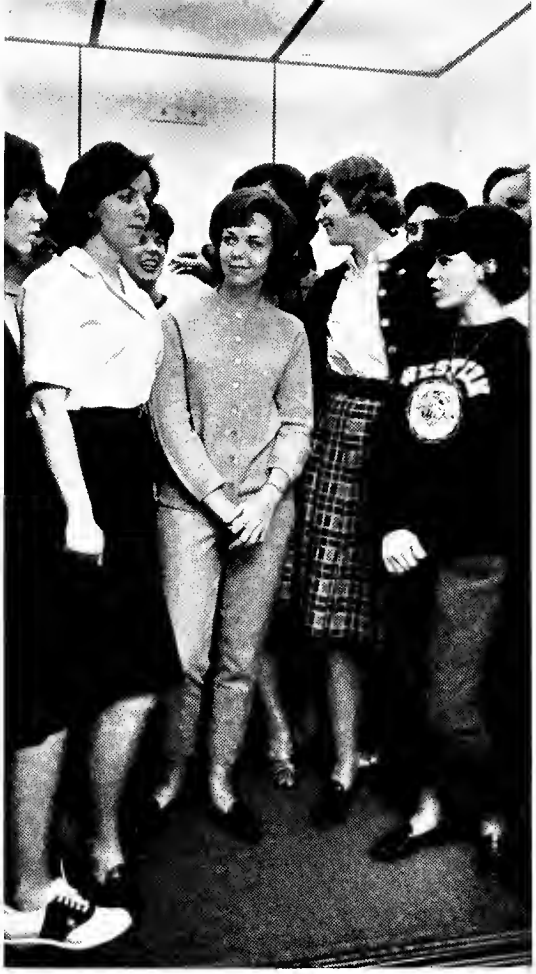

We as students of Georgia Baptist Hospital School of Nursing make our entrance upon the stage on which three years of our lives are played. The scenery and props are in place; the curtain has risen. However, the role we play—the casting of our characters—is left to us. Ours is the power to make that role great or small—rewarding or empty. Within our hands is placed the molding of a life—our life.

The climax of our first scene comes when we receive our cap. Then we are on our way to stardom when, as full-fledged students, we begin our leading role.

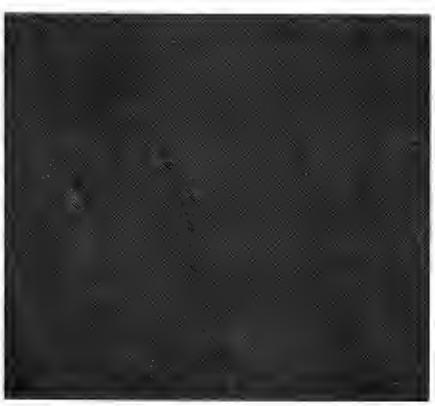

The first part we played was that of a carefree "probie", agog with the wonders of nursing and of being on our own with dozens of candidates for new friends. We unpacked our bags and began the rigorous but intriguing task of becoming an integral part of Georgia Baptist Hospital School of Nursing.

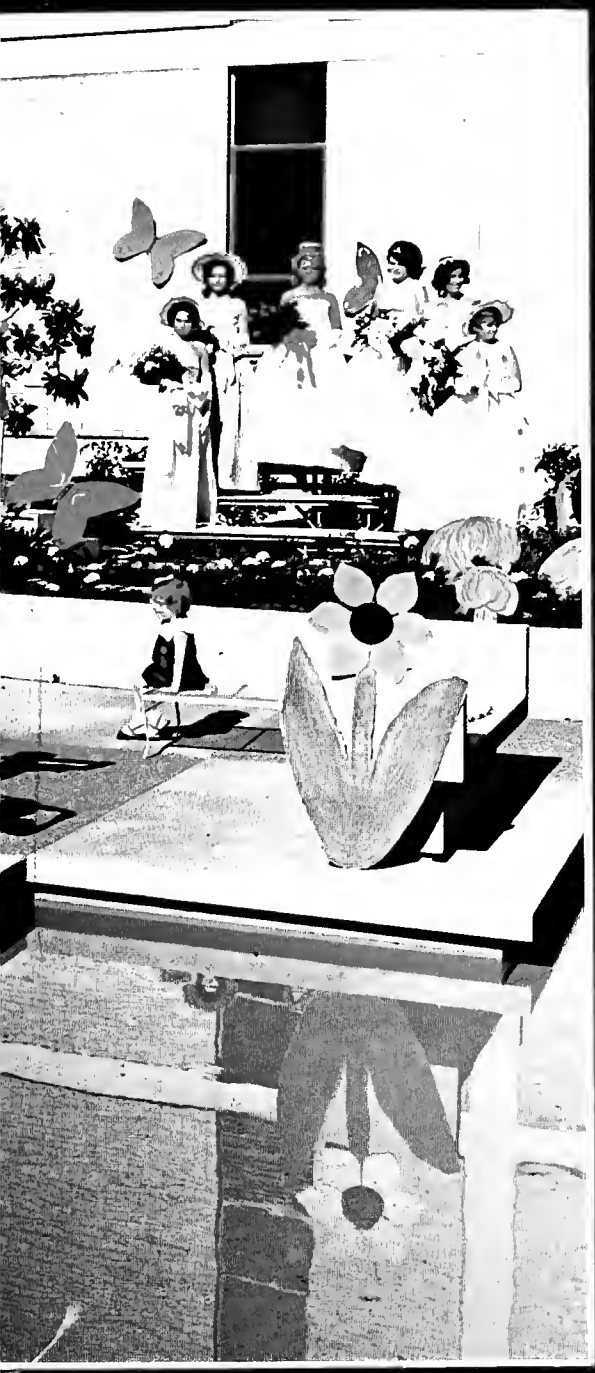

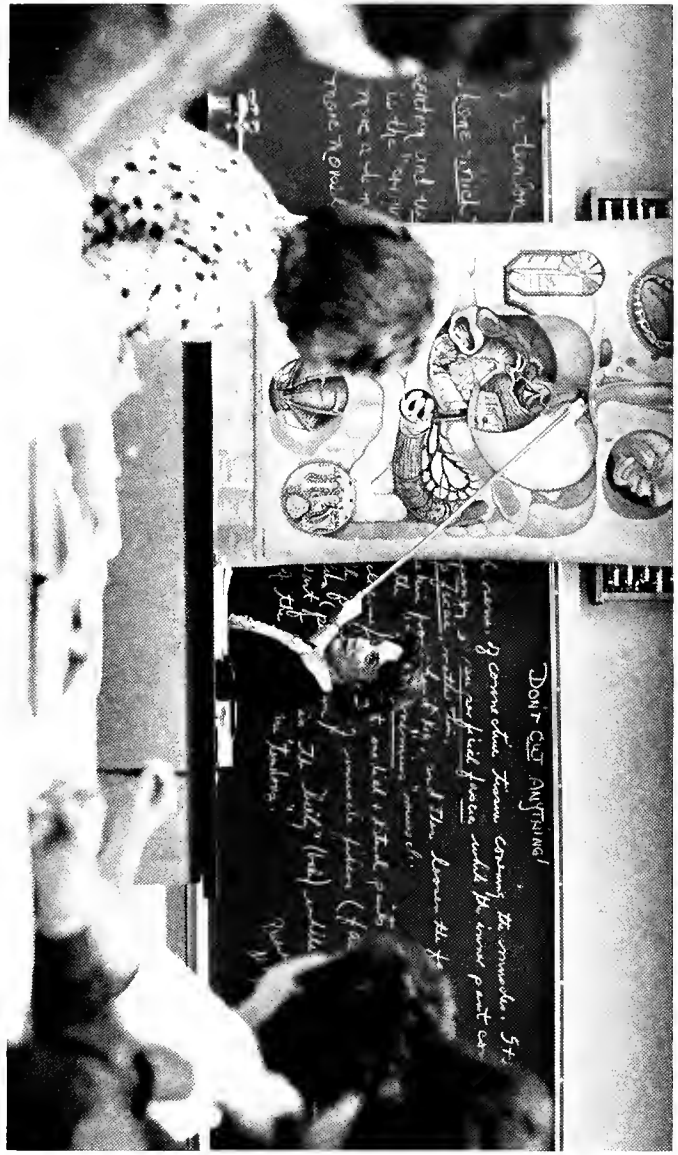

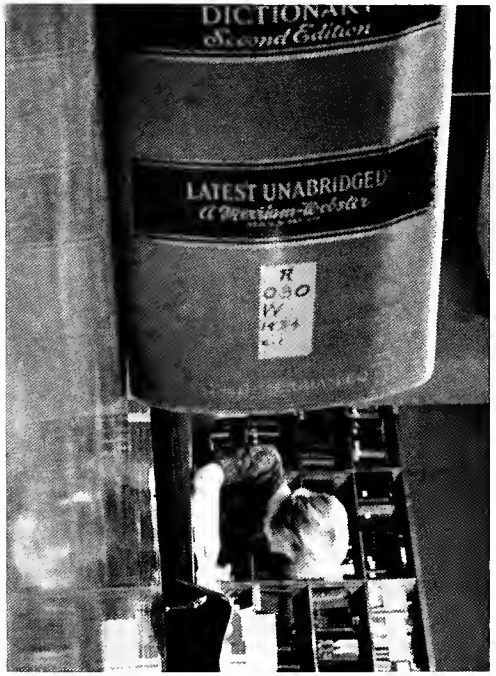

And then there's May Day . . .
Nurses shed their white cocoons and take on the splendor that transforms a beautiful but complacent patio into a fairyland, and there's sure to be a leprechaun peeking around the corner as our queen makes her grand entrance.
Amid laughter and festivities
we prove that student nurses, while efficient, scientific and professional, are really young at heart.

3 1833 02701 8992

Then the big moment comes . . . We settle down and really begin our work of becoming nurses. There are classes, classes, and more classes. We attend wide awake; we attend half asleep; and in between times we study. We study for that moment when we, as nurses, attain our highest goal—that of being prepared to serve and to act when needed.

While waiting for the curtain to rise on another act of our lives, we gaze out at the bright lights of Atlanta and the soft back drop of the sunset. As we review the day we have just lived, we reconsider the goals on the horizons of our lives. With complete humility and sincerity, we whisper,

"God lend us past the setting of the sun
To wizard islands, of august surprise,
God make our blunders wise."

Vachel Lindsay
"Columbus"

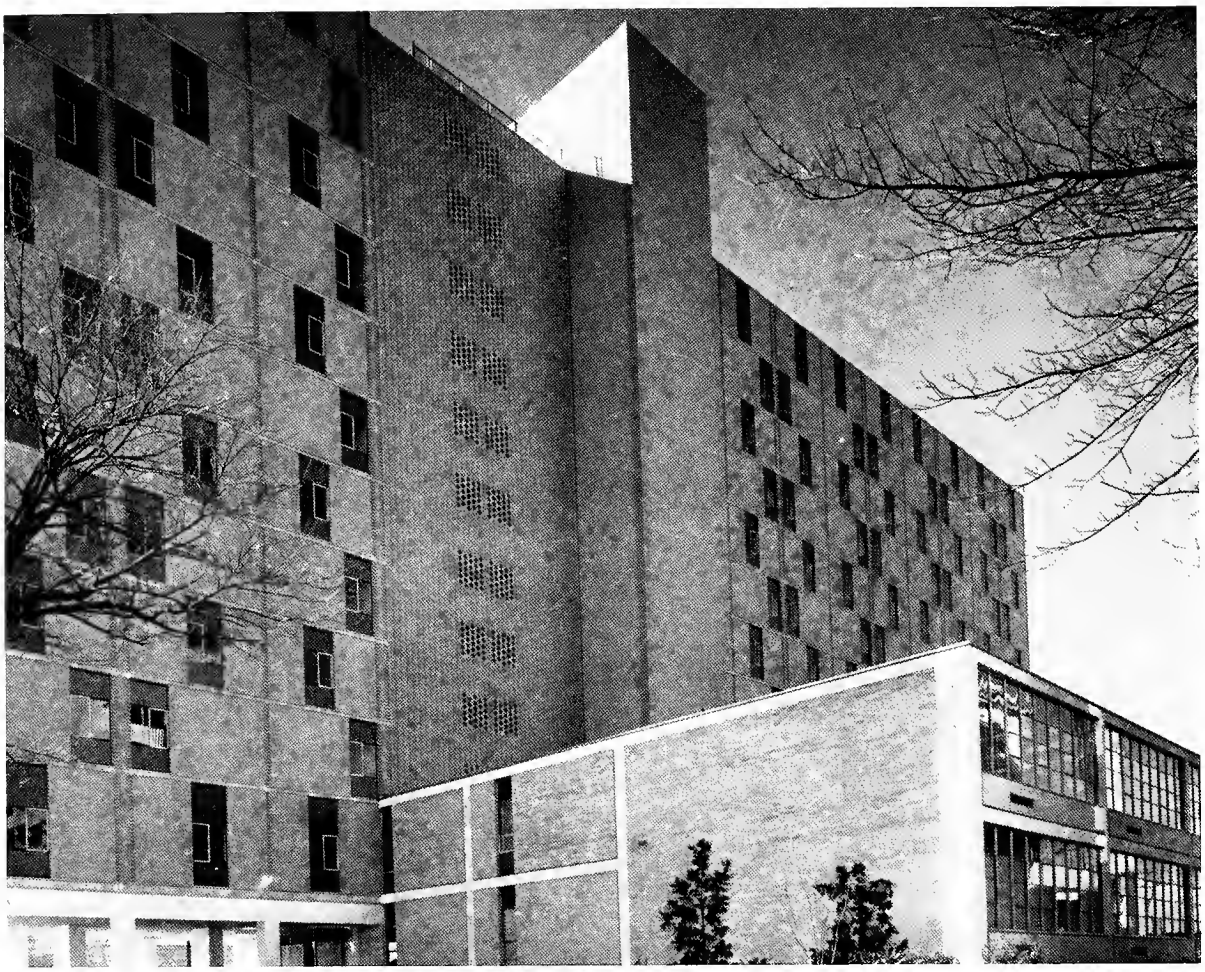

As the curtain falls, our act as student nurses is over, and we find moments to relax and indulge in that wonderful process of being unique individuals. There's Cupid and his bow on the job and Alexander Bell's marvelous invention brings messages of ecstasy as tired feet and half-written term papers are forgotten. With songs in our hearts, we welcome the magic of moonlight and roses and the joy of being young and in love.

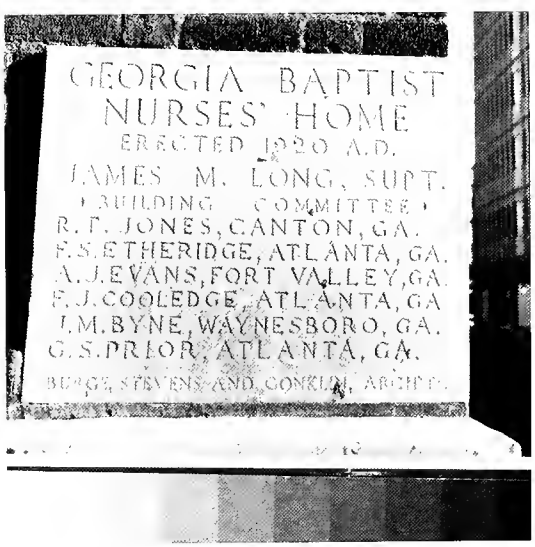

With the changing of the seasons comes the changing of the scenes at our campus. Old buildings come down and new ones go up. As we were awaiting the completion of the new dormitory just a year ago, we are now anticipating the completion of our new activities building. We watched closely as the foundations were laid and the walls were begun. Before our eyes we saw a gawky structure take form and grow until it became a building—simple, but with a grace all its own. We realized that here was an analogy—as the building grew, we grew. Our personalities became more complete and our outlook broadened.

Administration

Eight o'clock in the morning until . . . These are the working hours of our administrative staff who so aptly run the machinery that keeps our hospital in perpetual motion. Yet, these people find time to turn their full attention to the problems we encounter—from staffing a 475 bed hospital to returning a dime lost in a vending machine to a very worried ten year old.

Our Governing Board Is Progressive

These men compose the Hospital Commission and originate the policies that form the framework for the existence of Georgia Baptist Hospital and School of Nursing. Elected by and responsible to the Georgia Baptist Convention, commission members give freely of their wisdom and judgment to make the hospital and school unique institutions of healing and learning.

Chairman Louie D. Newton (with ruler) is telling Mr. Warren P. Sewell that the "water hits the student" in the pool of the Activities Building as indicated on the blueprints. Dr. Searcy S. Nursing Service

Nursing Service employs tactics that would make a general envious as they recruit and direct the nursing personnel to the areas of greatest need and make our hospital secure. Theirs is a twenty-four hour daily vigil and they keep it well.

Student nurses find kindred souls among the residents and interns of our hospital, for they, like we, are students of medicine. Their area of healing often extends beyond the patient's room as they offer sympathetic ears and lengthy explanations to us.

Personnel Department

Mrs. Jo P. Watson, Personnel Director, discusses an applicant's qualifications with Secretary Mrs. Pat Martin.

Post Office

Mrs. Helen Long (right) and Mrs. Mamie Jackson are true to the old tradition—the mails must go through. Sometimes, the Post Office Department doesn't cooperate to get the mail delivered to the Hospital on time—then, there are those questions—"Is the mail ready? Do I have a letter?"

Admitting

These ladies provide around-the-clock coverage to receive requests for patient accommodations from the doctor and assign patients according to their medical needs and available space.

Laboratory

Miss Judy Woods and Mrs. Martha Warren are typical of the Laboratory's registered medical technologists. Their skills are vital aids to the doctor and his patient.

Dr. Robert Farrell, Pathologist, and Surgeon John P. Wilson discuss a biopsy which was highly suspicious of cancer.

Mrs. Donna Hall is using her skill and expensive laboratory equipment to answer a doctor's question about his patient.

Mrs. Bernice Jones and the Blood Bank offer extensive blood therapy.

Pharmacy

Director of Pharmacy Services Harry W. Urhan, Jr. demonstrates the sterile "click" of a bottle of solution manufactured by his department.

Pharmacists must serve inpatients as well as written prescriptions for clinic patients.

X-Ray

Drs. Long, Edenfield and Taylor, Radiologists, are seldom this relaxed.

Dr. Taylor and Dr. Chandler Smith confer on a film.

The laboratory, pharmacy, and X-ray departments are beehives of industry at GBH. Their workers seek to find the answers to the multitude of riddles sent to them each day and issue corrective measures in the form of diagnosis, suggestions, and drugs.

The words English, biology, psychology, and chemistry are very much a part of our vocabulary during our first nine months here, for these are representative of the courses that are taught to us by members of the Tift College Faculty. A co-operative arrangement exists between the School of Nursing and Tift which allows student nurses to enroll in the Tift extension courses for three quarters to earn approximately thirty to forty-five quarter hours of college credit. Our study of these subjects helps in the building of a firmer foundation for our growth as young women and as student nurses.

Coordinator

When the going gets rough—whether with work, fellow students, grades, or one's present heart throb—we always find a sympathetic ear, a word of encouragement and some sound advice as we frequent the little office tucked away in a nook of the stair well on second floor. Susan Moon makes use of the library resources as she delves into some detailed research.

It is here that we begin our study of the principles and procedures of nursing that soon become "second nature" to us. We meet the individual and the patient for the first time, and we soon come to realize that they are one and the same—that each patient for whom we care is an individual with physical, mental, social and spiritual needs—needs which we as student nurses will attempt to meet. It is here that we begin the education that will take us from our first hesitant days as a "probationer" to the days of assurance as a "SENIOR".

The words myocardial infarction, diabetes, emphysema—all have a familiar sound to those studying medical nursing! Here the student often meets the patient with a long-term illness. Here she frequently comes face to face with the reality of death. However, it is in medical that she learns anew the value and preciousness of every single day of health and life to those she serves. She comes to realize that though days cannot often be added to life, life can be added to each day that we live.

Surgical Nursing

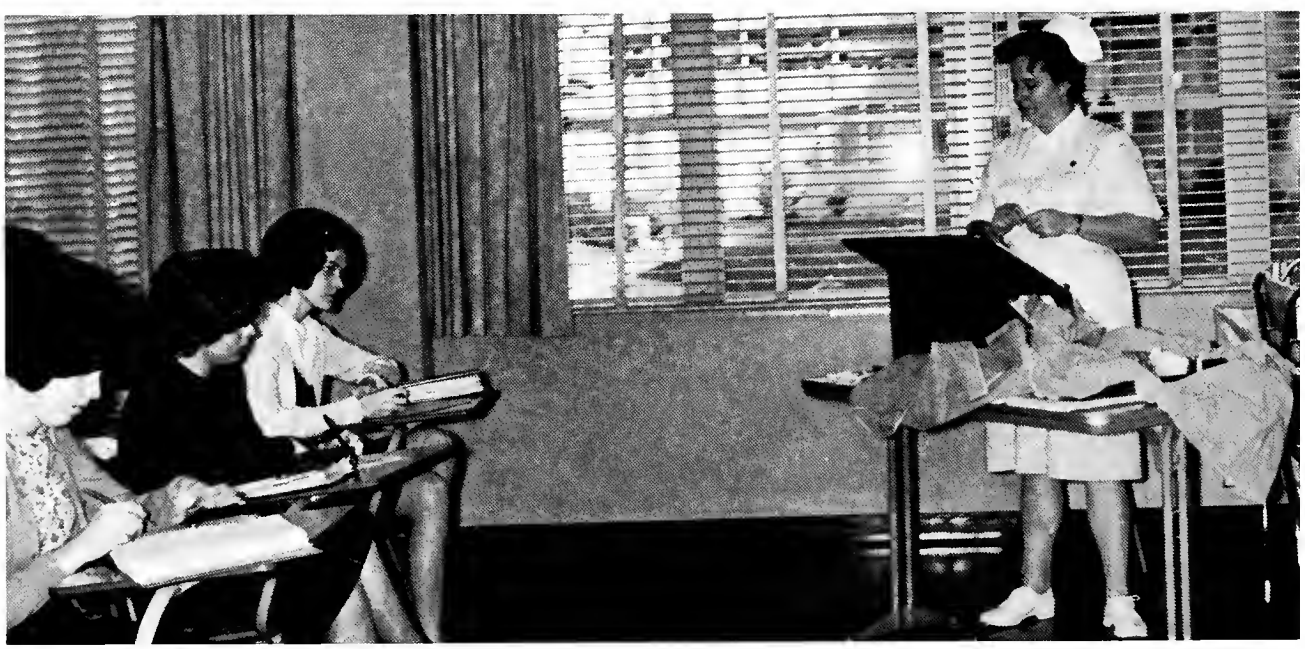

MRS. ROSE McGEE, R.N., M.N.
Instructor

Surgical nursing presents many joys to the student as she sees many of her patients admitted, treated surgically, and dismissed in a state of improved health. There is presented to her the challenge to do her best in the advancement of the patient's recovery and to encourage the patient to do his best also. Here as in all phases of nursing, there is sadness and grief at times, but the joy of sharing the victory of recovery makes surgical nursing a valuable and meaningful experience.

Instructor

Miss Avary Bales, R.N., checks the blood pressure of a patient during the 11-7 shift.

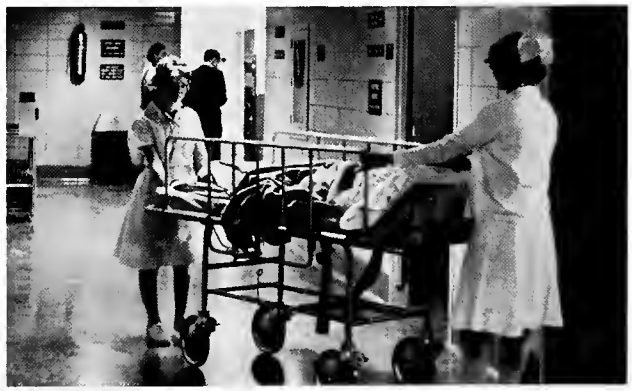

The rare moments of quietness in the emergency room are frequently shattered by the sound of approaching footsteps and a stretcher —another person is in need of immediate medical attention. We student nurses feel some measure of gratification when we know that in some way we are able to meet that need. The value of accuracy in moments of tension and quick decision is impressed upon the student as she administers nursing care in the emergency room and as she learns how to function in a disaster setting.

EENT

Cataracts, tonsils, and wisdom teeth —what a mixture! The three weeks students spend in Eye, Ear, Nose, and Throat is a valuable and often unforgettable experience. One never ceases to be amazed at the many excuses and avenues of escape that our young patients present to us when it is time for that pre-operative injection! Nor does one ever forget the happiness in the face of the patient who after a cataract operation has improved vision. The blessings of the special organs of sense that God has given to man become more apparent during this phase of our nursing experience.

Central Service

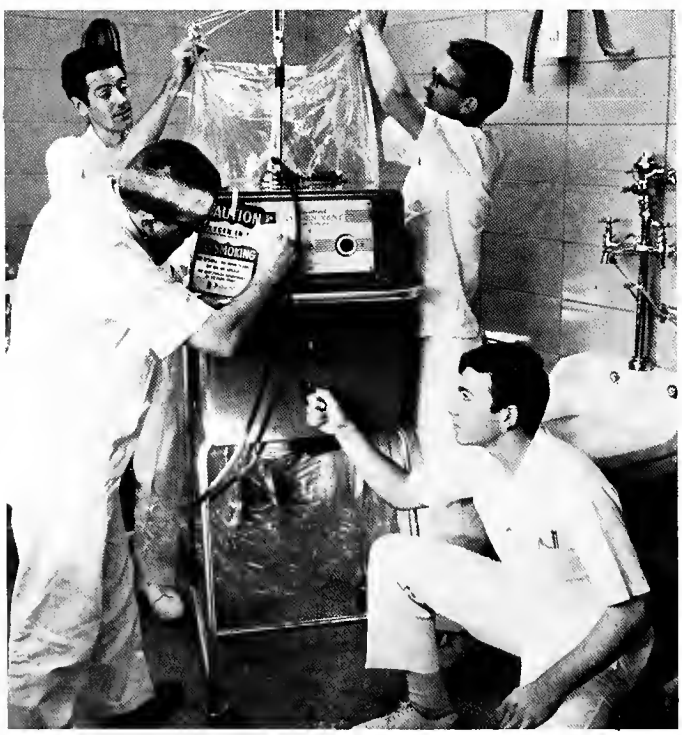

No hospital could function without a central supply, for it is the task of this department to furnish the patient with those items needed in his care and treatment.

Oxygen and Inhalation Therapy

"Extension 259? Please send an oxygen tent to room 459 stat!" Similar statements are made many times each day in our hospital. Oxygen has and always will be a substance that man will need in order to live. Indeed oxygen therapy plays a vital role in the medical treatment of disease today!

Recovery Room

It is in the recovery room that a post-operative patient receives immediate intensive care before he is returned to the surgical unit. Here students become more conscious of the importance of the accurate observation of a patient's condition.

I.V. Therapy

Intravenous fluids often means the difference between life and death for a patient. Learning the proper administration of these fluids is not an easy task for the student nurse, but it is an aspect of her education that is essential and one that must be learned with great accuracy and skill.

Miss Joan Smith, R.N., Miss Kathy Drawdy, R.N., Miss Rosa Asencios, R.N., compose the 3-11 pm shift.

Pediatrics

MRS. M. SHERMAN, R.N., B.S.
Instructor

MRS. BETTY GAFNEA, R.N.
Clinical Instructor

Changing diapers, counting I.V. drops, and taking pulse and respirations every hour are a part of the busy scene of 6 North. It can be said truthfully that there is never a dull moment! Though this is a time of very exacting work both on the clinical unit and in the classroom, it is a time of challenge as we as student nurses work with our small patients. Most of the time we seem to frighten them, but we soon realize that their anxiety stems mainly from their being in a strange environment. It is our responsibility to meet their medical needs as well as to be aware of this anxiety and in some way attempt to lessen it. Long after we have completed this rotation, the memories of many of these children remain in our hearts.

Dr. Ellzey listens to the heart of one of her small patients.

Pediatrics teaches students how to make friends among the younger generation as shown by Linda Hook's smile as she looks at Suzanne Shelton.

G.B.H. instructors bring news of happenings in Atlanta while students are on affiliation.

For three months at Milledgeville State Hospital we live and work with people whose mental and emotional problems have altered their entire way of living. Many times the most meaningful thing we can do is simply to sit quietly beside them without making any attempts at verbal communication. For once we are not busy giving injections, taking blood pressures, or making beds. We find that our greatest therapeutic tool is ourself. Perhaps one of the greatest joys of our nursing experience is to see a patient at Milledgeville who has been apart from this world find again his place within it.

Virginia McPherson, Sara Pattison, Jane Conner, Lucia Whitaker, and Marcia Lewis are part of the group that visited DeKalb Convalescent Center, Decatur, Ga., during their Orthopedic and Neurological Nursing rotation.

Out Patient Clinics

Sheffield Clinic is a familiar sight on our campus. For many years it served primarily as a cancer clinic. However, now it contains medical, surgical, obstetrical and pediatric outpatient clinics in addition. We receive clinical experiences here in various rotations. Selected home visits are made with the Public Health Coordinator, Mrs. Allsbrook, for follow-up patient care.

(right) Mrs. Evelyn Claypool, R.N., is Supervisor of Sheffield Clinic. Last year, approximately 11,000 visits were made by patients qualified to attend.

Surgery

No student nurse ever forgets the first time she "scrubbed" in on a surgical procedure! It is a time of fear and anticipation as the miracles of modern surgery become a reality to her. In surgery one gains the knowledge of accuracy and sterile technique that become a lasting part of her nursing education. Also, it is in surgery that the student becomes more aware of the correlation between a patient's experience in surgery and his behavior and condition on the floor.

September Officers

September 14, 1964, welcomed an additional one hundred twelve new freshmen to our campus. They, too, came inspired, hopeful and anticipating their future as nurses. As time passes their ideals and concepts of the meaning of nursing will be altered somewhat by learning and experience. May they continue to hope and to dream within the realm of mature reality.

May 12, 1964: Brenda Stewart, Sharon Fisher, Mary Frazier and Judy Womack were so pleased to see the site being cleared for the Activities Building that they wanted to help.

As we have progressed in our course of study, it is interesting to follow the progress of the School and of the Hospital in expanding its facilities. This year the Parking Pavilion is being doubled and converted into a self-park operation.

It is during these days as a junior that the student is acquiring the discipline and the patience to remain at a task that is exacting but that can be so very rewarding. It is during this time that the young girl begins to assume the role of a woman. The days pass quickly as she anticipates the wearing of the black band and the pearl button—the senior's crowning glory.

This is a familiar expression of Mrs. Clyde Wilson, Director of Student Activities, as she meets with officers of the various student organizations in planning our many social, religious and recreational opportunities.

Miss Carolyn Joyner, Assistant Director of Student Activities, "passes" on a program layout being prepared by Ann Kearson.

Edna Forrester, Charlene Stone, Alice Braswell and Lyn Collins presented the music at the Flint River Association's Hospital Day meeting at First Baptist Church, McDonough, Ga. Mr. George Alexander was host for the delightful dinner.

These two ladies spend countless hours in planning and directing activities that add to our growth and development. Their office door always stands open to the student who may be in need of a friendly ear.

Mrs. Wilson also functions as a contact person for deputation groups to various church and association meetings. This is an especially important task during the annual Mother's Day Charity Offering appeal for Georgia Baptist Hospital.

Literary Society

The monthly meetings of the Literary Society stimulate our minds as we discuss the book that is a current "Best Seller". This is another activity that helps us to develop into well rounded young adults.

Miss Katherine Brim, Assistant Director, Department of Diploma and Associate Degree Programs, National League for Nursing, New York, N.Y., conducted a consultation visit to our School on January 18, 19, 1965.

The school year of 1964-65 was a big one for us. There was a visit from an NLN consultant, the usual rush to and from work, and we all looked on with interest as Mrs. Musick became very deft at demonstrating crutch-walking to her orthopedic classes. She employed the "do-it-yourself" method.

Christmas brought the hustle and bustle of busy fingers flying to make gifts worthy of the recipient. And there were moments, too, when we paused to become better acquainted as did the Y.W.A. girls at the tea.

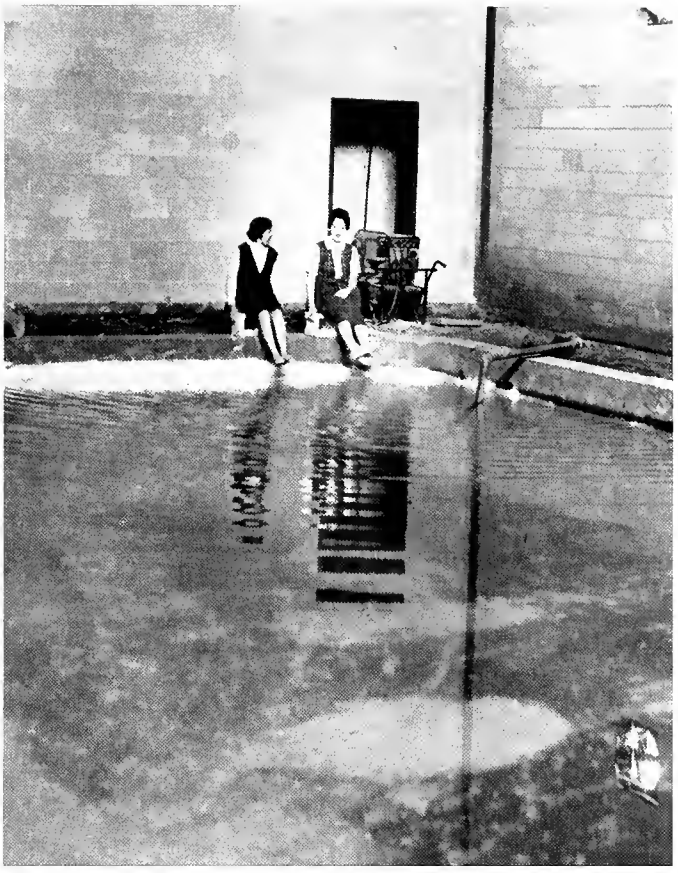

Nancy Stamey serves Katie Leverett as Pat Sexton and Betty Knight stand by.

Leisure brought a "Hootenanny" by some Tech fellows and Monday nights were spent at Vespers. Meanwhile, we watched with expectation as the building on the parking lot took the form of an Activities Building.

Then one day the doors were opened and we entered our own private world of sport. Bowling brought exercise as well as humor as the "weaker sex" displayed great form in their ability. And the water looked inviting even on a cold winter day when one realized it's heated.

And Coach Godfrey has visions of even more trophies next year with a court of our own on which to practice; but then, she always adds it will take some doing since this year four trophies found their way to GBHSN through the skill of our team.

Judy Krause models the graduate uniform selected by the senior class.

There was the excitement of selecting a graduate uniform. And, in a more serious moment, the feeling of pride in honoring a distinguished GBHSN graduate.

Miss Dana Hudson, R.N., Director of Nursing at Georgia Baptist Hospital for more than twenty years, presented the plaque. Miss Teal's pastor, Rev. Don Hazel, Villa Rica, Ga. and Mrs. Ransbotham participated in the ceremony.

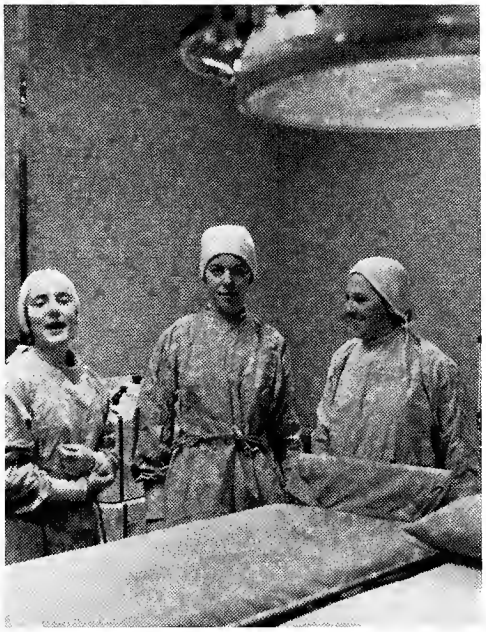

When our minds are overtaxed from study—or worry—we retire to the cafeteria where we find a congenial atmosphere and hear the latest gossip. Refreshed, we may even consider a bout in the snow or a trek up ten flights of stairs.

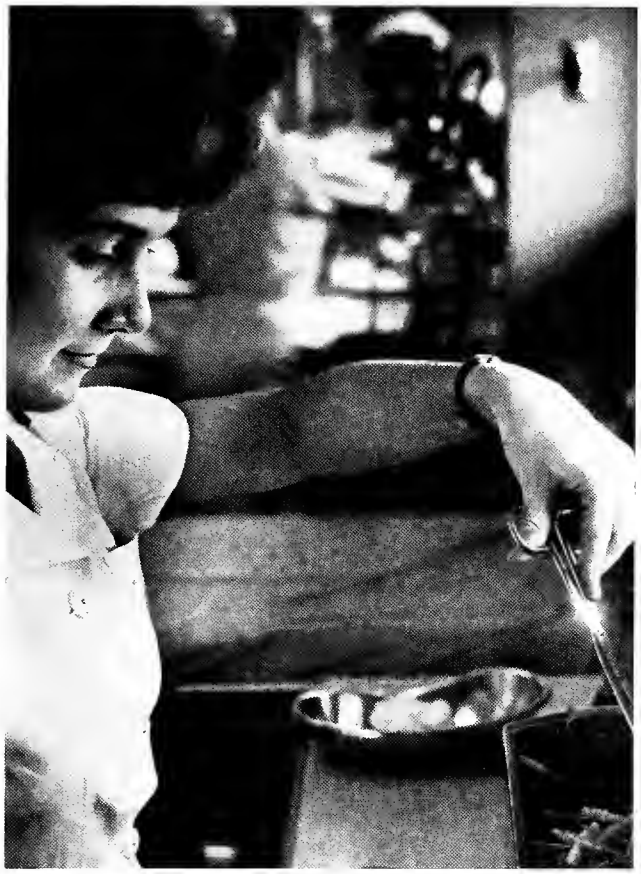

Yes, it really did snow! January 16, 1965, was the date. We dearly loved it.

However, there still remains a time in the life of each student nurse when she must face surgery. Not all of us are as brave as the blaze Miss Kennedy, but if we felt we would be as warmly received as Miss Henson and Miss Joiner, we would willingly go.

Student Nurse Week

This is a time set aside during the year for students to verbalize and to place upon paper what nursing means to each of us. Every clinical rotation student is encouraged to write a theme entitled "What Nursing Means to Me." The themes are read on Friday night and the author of the theme judged to be the most outstanding is chosen as "Miss Student Nurse."

It is a time when the bond between student and faculty is strengthened. Most of all it is a time for remembering and for planning as we forge ahead toward our goal of becoming professional nurses.

158 Mrs. Pauline Jones, Head Housemother, cautiously reads her "fortune" from the fortune cookies served by Saudra Wages.

Brenda Clack Chosen 1965 Miss Student Nurse

"All of my life I have been taught that the only way to reach a set goal is to work diligently without faltering, toward it. I came to Georgia Baptist Hospital School of Nursing two and one-half years ago with one goal in mind—that goal was to become a good nurse.

"A good nurse is a multi-faceted personality who may be called upon at any time to be a counselor, minister, confidante, mother, teacher and friend. To be all these things adequately is to have reached a height of maturity that most people cannot attain within a lifetime.

"Nursing has given me my finest hour thus far in my short life because I have come to realize that life is very precious and that its preservation is a spiritual as well as a physical task if one is to live it to the fullest . . . Perhaps one day I can be to nursing what nursing is to me."

The 1965 HYPO

Countless hours are required to create a yearbook. These were familiar scenes in Mr. Zwald's office as Editor Crumbley assigned page lay-outs to Harriett Pilgrim and body copy to Miss Pearl Taylor. Lee Thornton (right) worked diligently to prepare descriptive and essential copy. The entire staff combined their best efforts to give you this original publication.

A bright spot on the horizon of each student is "Black Band." This is the symbol that signifies to all that this student has entered her last phase in the process to make her a graduate nurse.

At a banquet fit for any queen, each girl receives that narrow strip of black velvet ribbon that will set her apart and with much pride she adds it to her cap.

As the curtain falls on our [illegible] we find that we have played many parts—many were outstanding—and exits. We have cast our characters and molded our lives—the greatness or smallness of our roles here has been [illegible]ed. As we leave, the scenery and props for a new act are in place—but we see new faces taking our parts. Again, yours is the power to make the role great or small—rewarding or empty. We challenge you to create a role both great and rewarding as you gain [illegible]s as a professional nurse.
